

I was shocked to learn that the consumers banking asociation (CBA) has filed for an exemption to Indiana's privacy laws. I am angry that businesses can use my phone to solicit for their material gain. if businesses are allowed to make cold calls advertising their products to unwilling private citizens, then the business should be required to contribute to our phone bills- say 35 cents per initial call to a number and 50 cents for each subsequent call. The fee could be directly deducted from my phone bill.

if the CBA cannot be required to make such a contribution, then please do not allow them to annoy us with their calls. Refuse to grant the CBA this exemption, Please!
